

September 13 - 27, 2013

Africa, a vibrant continent, people live with life and death every day. Sensible healthcare is not always available, especially in rural areas, yet life and health is dear to all. Peoples vitality is not dulled by the over-use of symptom suppressing side-effect laden medical products. Homeopathy can therefore have an astonishingly immediate effect even in the most serious cases of which there are many. So, by joining us on this course in Ghana you will be amongst highly experienced homeopaths and teachers, the Drs. Bhattachareya from Kolkata India - in an environment of intense hands-on homeopathy.

Homeopathy in Africa changes lives - training in Ghana will change yours

By Angie Metzger

This is a unique opportunity to study with Drs. Bhattachareya, two renowned homeopaths, diagnosticians and teachers from Kolkata with more than 35 years of clinical experience. They volunteer in support of the Project to facilitate this course in Ghana. Their approach to practice is grounded in Hahnemann's Organon and classical teaching, applied to clinical practice.

The Ghana Homeopathy Project has been supporting clinics at the village Integrated Health Centre for 8 years, run by Clinic Director and Homeopath 'Emperor'. We are also holding regular outreach clinics to surrounding local villages where often 30+ patients are seen in a day.

This course offers you vast clinical experience in a primary care setting benefiting experienced homeopaths as well as less experienced colleagues who will be able to observe and join the case discussions. There will also be scheduled classes in homeopathic philosophy in practice and materia medica as well as time for case reviews.

The Mafi-Seva community clinic is active day and night and many patients arrive often having walked long distances to seek help and medical treatment. The clinic also serves as a birthing centre with a local midwife present.

You will have ample opportunity to witness homeopathy in action and see the materia medica coming to life with many presentations including tropical diseases under the guidance of the renowned Indian homeopaths who are experienced prescribers for a wide range of pathologies.

The course is based in the rural African village of Mafi-Seva in the lower Volta region, approx 3 hours drive from Accra. You will be collected at the airport and the group will travel there by minibus.

Accommodation in the village is simple in our newly built volunteers block with basic facilities, 2 participants to a room. All meals are provided and cooked in the village kitchen. Vegetarian meals will be provided, meat or fish on request.

Time permitting, we plan some short trips to see the surrounding areas.

This course is organized by me Angie Metzger, homeopath and Board member of PISHAM, a Ghana Homeopathy Project supported college of homeopathy in Accra. I have been to West Africa many times and have been working with the Ghanaian team for the past 6 years. I have taught on the first course offered in Ghana to train homeopaths supported by the Project.

This course will be open for some of the time to our Ghanaian students who will join the group in the village to participate and gain experience in clinical skills. The Ghana Homeopathy Project will support and fund this trip for our Ghanaian colleagues. You will have the opportunity to exchange experiences and we will learn from each other in this unique meeting of different cultures united by the spirit of homeopathy.

Sharing across continents - Dr Kalishankar with Emperor

The cost for the duration of the trip, excluding flights but including course fee, outings, accommodation, full board and transport is £750.
